Friday, 15 March: Mobilisation for climate

Facebook page \(fr\)

How can we remain unconcerned about or neglect climate issues, whether at personal or at professional level?

Climate is indeed a major issue and the very challenge of our time.

Whether as EU staff or as European citizens, parents, young and old people, we are all resolutely concerned.

We greatly welcome the European Union's current climate policy committed to reducing its greenhouse gas emissions by at least 40% by 2030, to improving its energy efficiency by 27% and increasing to 27% the use of renewable energy sources. Other measures and ever more ambitious policies in favour of climate must however be implemented at all levels, for the sake of future generations!

"Climatologists say that even a 2-degree temperature rise will bring famine, drought, floods, tornadoes, wars and extinction - and that's simply because today's adults are not worried about tomorrow. They steal our future just under our eyes", writes Youth for Climate on the Facebook page announcing the event.

Many young Europeans are trying to challenge our politicians and it starts paying. Europe has a major role to play in favour of climate.

Marches for climate and other actions take place; here is one of a new kind: a global strike. This "Global strike for Future" will take place on March 15. Let's all participate to show our commitment!

SFE fully supports the initiative and encourages all colleagues to participate this Friday, March 15!

Do not hesitate to share your initiatives, even small local ones (composting, sorting), we will publish them on our site. Small streams make big rivers!
